Some liberals are in denial about how close we are to fascism. Last night at dinner, a friend was saying that the system will hold if Trump is reelected.

I asked him what's stopping Trump from putting more pro-Trump members on the Supreme Court. He said he'd have to get 60 Senators to go along with him. I asked him what's stopping the Senate from removing the filibuster, making it a simple majority?

Our system of laws, rules, and traditions can be broken. I hope all liberals wake up to that.

In 2020, 80 million Americans — about one-third of the potential electorate — did not vote in the presidential election. Turnout this year appears likely to be about the same. Perhaps that's because, according to a YouGov poll, only 18 percent of Americans fear that their country could become a dictatorship in their lifetimes. That may be a fatal failure of imagination. When Fascists can't win elections, they don't adapt their strategy, they just reject democracy.

Likewise, when they can no longer count on the law to bend over backwards to protect them, they just reject the concept of the rule of law.

This is a major story.

Basically, a nationwide price fixing apparatus (RealPage) has created environments where there are apartments to rent but no one to rent them due to the price being too high. That statistic in certain markets set the FED off, and now they are going to address a situation that's been effecting a lot of people in the background. This could lead to class action lawsuits. Hopefully it will bring housing costs down.

Is RealPage the website that allows landlords to see renting prices and able to manipulate via that company/website?

It's not exactly landlords seeing prices.

It's every landlord agrees to share all of their prices with one guy and set their rent at whatever prices the one guy dictates. That would be super illegal. But you replace "one guy" with "an algorithm" and you can do it for at least a decade before any states or the FTC sues you.

Some real talk about this platform: It has become clear to me that as an account that posts about politics, it's impossible to grow an audience. I regularly post stuff that gets thousands of likes and hundreds of shares but my following has been stuck for a year. So while I am going to continue to post here, I think it's safe to say at this point that Threads simply is not a suitable replacement for twitter. It's disappointing but the reach of political accounts is totally throttled.

Or, here's another idea for you Aaron: rather than posting most of your content on Twitter and a sprinkling here, post *most* of your content on here, and use the clout you have with your almost 1million followers on Twitter to incentivize them to join you on Threads.

yes, but ... I *live* in my mentions and I can go weeks without my follower numbers ticking up much. this is a Meta problem for those of us who routinely post political content. it doesn't matter much to me bc I don't make a living on my stuff, but for people like Aaron, followers can translate into subscribers, which then help feed his family.

Pete Buttigieg perfectly called out Samuel Alito's wife, Martha-Ann Alito, over her hatred of the Pride flag. Well said, Pete!

the Pride flag and her desire to replace it with a "Sacred Heart of Jesus" flag. She stated, "I want a Sacred Heart of Jesus flag because I have to look across the lagoon at the Pride flag for the next month ... but when you are free of this nonsense, I'm putting it up, and I'm going to send them a message every day."

Buttigieg replied, "Look, I'm often reminded that the most important thing in my life, which is my marriage and my family, and the two beautiful children that my husband, Chasten, and I are raising, that marriage only exists by the grace of a single vote on the United States Supreme Court that expanded our rights and freedoms back in 2015 and made it possible for somebody like me to get married," Buttigieg said.

"Supreme Court justices have an unbelievable amount of power, and by the nature and the structure of the Supreme Court, there's no supervision over that power," he continued. "They're entrusted with it literally for as long as they live. And part of that trust is we expect them to enter into those enormously consequential decisions that shape our everyday lives with a sense of fairness."

The Alitos have previously drawn criticism for their use of controversial symbols. Justice Alito came under fire for displaying an upside-down American flag, a symbol associated with the January 6 insurrection, at their home in Virginia; he said it was his wife's doing. They have also been noted for flying the "Appeal to Heaven" flag, which has historical roots dating back to the Revolutionary war.

Buttigieg contrasted the Pride flag with the insurrectionist symbols displayed by the Alitos. "I also hope that most Americans can understand the difference between a flag that symbolizes love and acceptance and signals to people who have sometimes feared for their safety that they're going to be OK and insurrectionist symbology; I'll just leave it at that," he said.

Feb 29, 2024 prediction:
If Biden wins and Congress has a Dem majority in both the Senate and the House Clarence Thomas will resign from the Supreme Court by the end of the year. He has a good chance of being impeached and wifey has a chance, albeit slight, of being prosecuted for being a seditionist. They will set sail in their RV and leave a life of corruption and sedition behind.

But, see, here's the thing: If there's no law that prevents this, no enforceable code of ethics that prohibits a Justice from doing this, then there's no crime. Thomas didn't do anything wrong, legally. You can't impeach him for something that's not legally proscribed.

Laws don't prevent crime, they give civilization legal recourse when its members act in a manner harmful to society.

I don't know much about the church these phobic Christians call home, but I can guarantee without any doubt that they've never been physically accosted on a Sunday morning by a group of LGBTQ human beings telling their kids how much danger they're in and how bad their parents are.

That's the point here: these Christians aren't rescuers, they're bullies.

They don't operate out of love but hatred.

JOHN PAVLOVITZ

The uninvited guests loudly and brazenly invaded this designated safe space with the usual religious diatribes about hell and perversion and Sodom, etc.

Out of the corner of my eye, I could see police escorting a couple of visibly agitated men to just beyond the festival's entrance, which was lined with LGBTQ-affirming veterans who created a human shield for guests, standing between them and the dozen or so other white Evangelicals from a local church who had signs accusing attendees (complete strangers to them) of grooming and sexualizing children, and chastising parents walking in with their families.

...hour or so and some histrionics from the protestors, the local sheriff instructed them to leave immediately or be fined.

Why?

Because, despite law enforcement's specific and repeated warnings, these supposed Christians continued to directly confront young children as they entered with their families, saying things to seven and eight year-olds like, "Do you know your parents are helping send you to hell?" and "Do you know all these people are dangerous?"

TODAY: At 9:30 am ET, Judge Cannon, in the MAL classified documents case, is holding a hearing on Donald Trump's "Motion to Dismiss the Indictment Based on the Unlawful Appointment and Funding of Special Counsel Jack Smith."

Specifically, she's focusing on the Appointments Clause challenge for the entirety of the day today: Trump claims that the Clause doesn't permit AG Garland to appoint, without Senate approval, Jack Smith as Special Counsel.

Adding to the morass is a bitter rift emerging between conservative Justices Amy Coney Barrett and Clarence Thomas over originalism, the act of interpreting the Constitution as it was intended to be understood at the time it was written. Although the pair arrived at the same decision in a minor ruling last week over a trademark dispute, Barrett went to great lengths to excoriate Thomas for his sloppy originalism.

Part of what is frustrating is the number of Democrats that voted for her appointment or abstained. Same with Coney Barrett to the first circuit. Neither were remotely qualified. ## STATEMENT FROM PRESIDENT JOE BIDEN ON THE PARDON OF LGBTQI+ SERVICE MEMBERS WRONGLY CONVICTED

Today, I am righting an historic wrong by using my clemency authority to pardon many former service members who were convicted simply for being themselves. Our Nation's service members stand on the frontlines of freedom, and risk their lives in order to defend our country. Despite their courage and great sacrifice, thousands of LGBTQI+ service members were forced out of the military because of their sexual orientation or gender identity. Some of these patriotic Americans were subject to court-martial, and have carried the burden of this great injustice for decades.

As Commander in Chief, I am committed to maintaining the finest fighting force in the world. That means making sure that every member of our military is safe and respected – so they can focus on their mission.

This is about dignity, decency, and ensuring the culture of our Armed Forces reflect the values that make us an exceptional nation. We have a sacred obligation to all of our service members – including our brave LGBTQI+ service members: to properly prepare and equip them when they are sent into harm's way, and to care for them and their families when they return home. Today we are making progress in that pursuit.

This coming from the man who supported DADT

<https://www.npr.org/2024/06/26/nx-s1-5003970/supreme-court-social-media-case>
In a major victory for the Biden administration, the U.S. Supreme Court on Wednesday reversed a lower court ruling that had placed significant restrictions on government officials' ability to communicate with social media companies regarding their content-moderation policies.

The court did not decide the question of what precisely constitutes permissible contacts between executive branch officials and social media companies. Rather, by a vote of 6-3, the court ruled that those challenging the government's interaction with social media companies lacked legal standing to sue.

Writing for the majority, Justice Amy Coney Barrett said that the plaintiffs had failed to make the case that the companies' actions could be traced to pressure from the Biden administration.

This means that those who perpetrate white collar securities fraud (my old baliwick) can only be dealt with in federal court. Will severely limit what the SEC can do.

Thievers on Wall Street now stand a much greater chance of evading civil liability.

Justice Sotomayor's dissent in the homelessness case:

"Sleep is a biological necessity, not a crime. For some people, sleeping outside is their only option. The City of Grants Pass jails and fines those people for sleeping anywhere in public at any time ... For people with no access to shelter, that punishes them for being homeless. That is unconscionable and unconstitutional. Punishing people for their status is 'cruel and unusual' under the Eighth Amendment."

In a ruling that will have massive implications for the power of federal agencies, the conservative majority on the Supreme Court just overruled the Chevron rule — the 1984 precedent that called for judges to give deference to federal agencies' interpretation of laws they administer. This is a big win for conservatives and business.

Court is saying it knows better than Congress. They can pass laws as detailed as they want and if they leave ambiguity so agencies have flexibility in regulating, that is their call. Court can't say, "We know better." They are 100% legislating from the bench.

By Josh Rojas Hillsborough County

PUBLISHED 6:03 PM ET JUN. 28, 2024

TAMPA, Fla. — A pair of University of South Florida students, Joseph Charry and Victoria Hinkley, who have been punished by the school for participating in pro-Palestine rallies on campus in April, said they recently learned both of their appeals have been denied.

“Even though I attempted to appeal this decision, they recently upheld it saying that the charges were justified,” said Charry. “But were they justified? No.”

The students spoke out during a Tampa Bay Students for a Democratic Society gathering near the USF campus on Friday. Hinkley said she has been expelled for organizing and leading two rallies at the end of April.

Charry said he was suspended by the school for a year because of his participation. Hinkley said she was only one week away from graduating when she was expelled.

“I had been going to USF for four years and was only five days away from graduating with my degree,” she said. “I was only one single assignment away from graduating.”

Tom is correct. At least it's not the moderator's job IF that's how you set up the debate -- and that's what everyone agreed to this time around (and likely neither party would have agreed to real time fact checking, certainly not Trump)

Which is AGAIN why I have repeatedly said debates are a lousy way to choose a leader.

What we should have is an interview. Hard questions. What's your plan for x, y, z? Etc. Each candidate separate. Live. Fact checked in real time.

RE:

"Moderate" does not mean "debate the candidate." I know people are lashing CNN as a means of coping here, but what you all really wanted was for Tapper and Bash to step in and take over, and that's not their job.

I'm with Tom here. Biden's campaign asked for the debate, negotiated the terms, and accepted it knowing their opponent. They then chose the wrong strategy for the debate prep. The third SCOTUS opinion today: the immunity decision. Written by Justice Roberts.

1ma few seconds ago pre=10:30 AM 7/1/2024

Held: "Under our constitutional structure of separated powers, the nature of Presidential power entitles a former President to absolute immunity from criminal prosecution for actions within his conclusive and preclusive constitutional authority. And he is entitled to at least presumptive immunity from prosecution for all his official acts. There is no immunity for unofficial acts."

katiephang

1mabout a minute ago

"(b) The first step in deciding whether a former President is entitled to immunity from a particular prosecution is to distinguish his official from unofficial actions. In this case, no court thus far has drawn that distinction, in general or with respect to the conduct alleged in particular. It is therefore incumbent upon the Court to be mindful that it is "a court of final review and not first view." Zivotofsky v. Clinton, 566 U. S. 189, 201."

There is ZERO way his insurrection case will meet this test, as Trump couldn't argue it was official business.

The only good news for Trump is that if the lower court does not shake its boots to hear the insurrection case quickly, it can delay the trial until after the election.

President Biden should declare via "official act" that Donald Trump has been stripped of his citizenship and is being deported for being a threat to our Republic. joyannreid So that's it, folks. The SCOTUS Leonard Leo Six just effectively made the U.S. president a KING. And if you don't think that means Donald Trump would become EVEN MORE DANGEROUS if put into office again, you are delusional. So here's what it is. You'd better get ready to do what it takes to keep him out, and that means vote for Joe Biden's brain in a jar if necessary and put every D on the ballot over the line, because ALL that matters now is control of the White House and BOTH wings of Congress.

The fact that two of the six justices who joined that majority are themselves part of the insurrectionist coven via their wives and their flags and that they are the paid functionaries of right wing extremist, Christian nationalist billionaires and greedy oligarchs makes this all the worse. This court has arrogated unprecedented power to itself, and now to its chosen monarch. And on the anniversary of the national celebration of the founders they pretend to revere quitting the British King.
